HEALTHY GROWTH

Low-cal options mean more cash for restaurant chains

MCT

What's good for bottoms also appears to be good for bottom lines, according to a Hudson Institute study released Thursday. The report found that restaurant chains offering more lower-calorie foods fare better financially.

"Consumers are hungry for restaurant meals that won't expand their waistlines, and the chains that recognize this are doing better than those that don't," said Hank Cardello, lead author of the report, and senior fellow at the Hudson Institute, a nonpartisan policy organization working to solve the obesity problem.

To conduct the five-year study, researchers analyzed the 21 of the nation's largest restaurant chains—from McDonald's to Olive Garden—from 2006 to 2011. They found that chains serving more low-calorie foods and beverages enjoyed better sales growth, higher customer traffic and stronger gains in total food and beverage servings than chains serving fewer lower-calorie options.

The authors defined lower-calorie as a sandwich or entree that had 500 or fewer calories. Beverages with 50 or fewer calories per 8-ounce serving also were in that group, as were appetizers, sides and desserts that contained 150 or fewer calories.

Foods or beverages that fell above those thresholds were considered "traditional."

"Until now, there has been little evidence that restaurants can do well by doing good," said Cardello, who hopes the findings will encourage more restaurants to dish out more lower-calorie options.

"Now we know that offering and promoting lower-calorie items is not just a nice thing to do, it's a business imperative," he said.

Although the report did not break down the data by specific chains, in 17 of the 21 restaurant chains analyzed, lower-calorie foods and beverages outsold traditional menu items.

Specifically, study authors noticed that sales of french fries had declined among those chains that sell the most lower-calorie foods. Also, lower-calorie-beverage sales were growing as sales of sugary beverages dropped. In steakhouses, servings of salads and green beans were trending up, Cardello said.

BY THE NUMBERS

500 calories

The authors defined lower-calorie as a sandwich or entree that had 500 or fewer calories.

50 calories

Beverages with 50 or fewer calories per 8-ounce serving also were in that group.

150 calories

Appetizers, sides and desserts that contained 150 or fewer calories also were included.

+5.5 percent

Chains that dished out more servings of lower-calorie items saw a 5.5 percent increase in store sales.

-5.5 percent

Chains that sold fewer lower-calorie items saw a 5.5 percent drop in sales.

Who's who?

Restaurants included in the "Lower-Calorie Foods: It's Just Good Business" represent half the revenue of the top 100 restaurant chains in the U.S. Collectively, they have $102 billion in annual sales. Among the 21 chains surveyed:

- » Wendy's
- » Burger King
- » Taco Bell
- » Applebee's
- » Chili's
- » Red Lobster
- » Outback Steakhouse

Smarter than a CTA phone thief?

GOING PUBLIC

Tracy Swartz

 @tswartz
 @tribune.com
 @tracyswartz

CTA riders, this is not the way to ring in the new year. Chicago police issued two separate alerts last week warning riders about recent cellphone thefts on the Red and Pink lines.

Police said a group of men have been snatching electronic devices from riders on trains and platforms between 55th and 95th streets on the Red Line since early this year.

This weekend, police released a photo of a suspect they say has been using a gun to rob riders of their cellphones on the Pink Line since late last month.

Cellphone theft, especially thefts of iPhones, long has been a problem on the CTA. In 2011, a 17-year-old boy was charged with first degree murder after he allegedly knocked down a 68-year-old woman and killed her as he stole an iPhone at the Fullerton stop.

Thefts, including those of phones, were up nearly 16 percent in 2012 compared to 2011, the CTA said. Robberies, which involve force or intimidation, were down 21 percent, according to the agency.

The CTA announced last week it will spend seven months retrofitting older train cars with high-definition cameras that already are on the new rail cars with the aisle-facing seats on the Pink, Green and Red lines.

Cameras across the CTA have helped police identify 14 suspects in 15 cases in the past eight months, the agency said last week.

Riders can do their part as well. Here are some safety tips from Going Public: If you need to use your phone, make sure not to do it by the door, where a rider can snatch it and run into the station.

Try to find a place where your back is to the wall, and be aware of your surroundings. Above all, ask yourself if that call can wait.

STATIONARY A weekly dispatch from a CTA station of note

This week: Cottage Grove Green Line

If you're the type of CTA rider who gets anxious waiting eight minutes for a train, the Cottage Grove Green Line stop in Woodlawn is not for you. The train to the Loop runs about every 20 minutes from Cottage Grove during morning rush hour and every 20 minutes from the Loop to Cottage Grove during evening rush hour. The station saw about 423,000 entries last year, up 1 percent from the previous year. These numbers are expected to rise in May, when the CTA shuts down the southern portion of the Red Line to overhaul its track and riders flock to the Green Line. Workers at the Cottage Grove station Monday were making network upgrades for phone lines, CTA Train Tracker displays and the PA system, the CTA said.

King-size Whopper of a Twitter hack

Add Burger King to the list of companies getting a crash course this month in the booms and busts of corporate social media.

First, Oreo was praised for its quick-thinking "You can still dunk in the dark" tweet during the Super Bowl blackout. Then last week, Poland Spring was criticized for being too slow to capitalize on Sen. Marco Rubio's consumption of its water during his GOP response to the president's State of the Union address.

Monday, it was the hacking of Burger King's Twitter account that put it in the spotlight—and not in a good way. Someone changed the @BurgerKing feed to look like that of McDonald's, substituting the McDonald's logo in place of Burger King's. The hackers sent several vulgar tweets, posted outrageous claims about company employees and practices and even linked to a Chief Keef video.

The hacked feed was live for more than an hour before Twitter shut it down at Burger King's request.

"We apologize to our fans and followers who have been receiving erroneous tweets about other members of our industry and additional inappropriate topics."

—Burger King statement

"We have worked directly with administrators to suspend the account until we are able to re-establish our legitimate site and authentic postings," Burger King said in a statement Monday afternoon. "We apologize to our fans and followers who have been receiving erroneous tweets about other members of our industry and additional inappropriate topics."

'How many ... have to die?'

Gun violence claims third student this school year at Roberto Clemente

Chicago Tribune

Hours before she was shot dead Friday, Frances Colon tuned in to President Obama's speech in Chicago with cautious optimism about the president's message.

"Me and my daughter, we watched the whole show," recalled Jose Colon, 46, her father. "She said, 'About time they do something with the gun thing.' ... And then she said, 'I'm going outside, Pop. I'm going to my friend's house.'"

It was one of the last things the Roberto Clemente Community Academy senior told her dad.

Frances Colon, a onetime student of the month who was preparing for college, was gunned down about 7 p.m. Friday in the 1100 block of North Pulaski Road, according to police. She was taken to Mount Sinai Hospital, where she was pronounced dead at 8:16 p.m.

Police think Colon was not the target, and was shot as someone else ran away from the gunman. No one was in custody Monday evening in connection with the case.

Colon, 18, is the third student at the North Side high school to be killed this year, Clemente principal Marcey Sorensen said. Rey Dorantes, 14, of the 2400 block of West Augusta Boulevard, a freshman at the school, was shot and killed Jan. 11. Another Clemente student, Jeffrey Stewart, 16, of the 5200 block of West Race Avenue, was shot and killed Dec. 9.

Jasmine Maymi leaves Roberto Clemente Community Academy on Monday carrying a tribute to Frances Colon. GETTYIMAGES

"I'm sick of it," Sorensen said. "How many more kids have to die before we do something?"

Heading to class Monday morning, sophomore Noel Roman said he's not surprised that his high school has had to deal with the recent string of fatal shootings.

"Considering the neighborhood, no," he said.

Jose Colon was driving his other daughter home from a friend's house Friday evening when he stopped near his block and noticed yellow tape and a white cloth over a body.

"When I saw the scene, I thought it was someone else until I got home and found out it was her," he said.

When he got home, he realized Frances still hadn't come back. Then police officers came, and his wife immediately recognized Frances' eyebrows in a picture attached to the folder an officer was carrying.

Jose Colon urged authorities to "make these people more afraid" by increasing minimum sentencing for gun crimes.

In the family's Humboldt Park living room, a photo shows Frances beaming in a cap and gown from her middle school. Next to the graduation memento is a greeting card-size picture of the first family.

The Colons even saw what they thought was Obama's helicopter zoom over their house Friday evening, presumably after he finished his speech at Hyde Park Academy on the South Side.

Jose Colon wasn't optimistic that the president's proposals would come to fruition soon enough.

"It's not over," he said. "This is just the beginning. Wait until summer comes along."

Here's What Our Patients Say...

"My shoulder pain has prevented me from working out and picking up my son. At first I doubted that it could work but this therapy has given me my life back."

"I was in denial about my knees as I winced on stairs, and put off going for a run. I didn't want to hear that I needed surgical intervention. I admit I was skeptical about how my knees could be improved with such non-invasive procedures. But I am happy to report that I was wrong. I went for my first run in about 18 months. NO PAIN! Thanks for relieving my knee pain!"

"My feet were burning, tingling, numb, and felt like pins were pricking at them...wearing socks hurt. This is the first time in 3 years that my feet do not have symptoms. I laugh because other doctors told me I would have to live with it."

"I have had severe back pain and sciatica for the past 10 to 15 years. Sleeping through the night was impossible. Receiving this treatment is the best decision I have made and I still can't believe how well it worked. I'm back to normal."

McCready is 5th dead from cast of 'Rehab'

Mindy McCready is the fifth former cast member of "Celebrity Rehab with Dr. Drew" to die in the past two years.

The 37-year-old country star, who appeared on Season 3 of the VH1 show, where she suffered an on-camera seizure, was found dead Sunday on the front porch of her Arkansas home. Authorities said she was the victim of a self-inflicted gunshot wound.

Alice in Chains bassist Mike Starr and former "Real World" cast member Joey Kovar also appeared on the show's third season. Starr died in March 2011 at 44, while Kovar, 29, died in August.

"Grease" actor Jeff Conaway, 60, who appeared on the show's first season, died of pneumonia in May 2011. However, the doctor who treated him for drug addiction for years told CNN it was his dependence on prescription painkillers that eventually cost him his life.

Authorities said that Season 2 cast member Rodney King's death in June 2012 was the result of accidental drowning, but the alcohol, cocaine, marijuana and PCP found in the 47-year-old's system were contributing factors.

"One of my hopes was, in bringing 'Celebrity Rehab' out, was to teach people how dangerous addiction was," the show's host, Dr. Drew Pinsky, said. "If I was doing a show on cancer, there would not be much surprise when my cancer patient died. In fact, we'd celebrate a few years of good-quality life. People don't understand that addiction has virtually the same prognosis."

Oil leak caused cruise fire

The fire that crippled the Carnival cruise ship Triumph started with a leak in a fuel-oil return line connected to the ship's No. 6 generator, the Coast Guard said Monday. Leaking oil hit a hot surface, starting the fire, said Teresa Hatfield, the lead investigator for the Coast Guard. Hatfield said there was no indication the leak was intentional.

Details emerge in model's death

Reeva Steenkamp was shot four times through the bathroom door at the home of Olympian Oscar Pistorius, a South African official familiar with the case told CNN on Monday. She was alive after she was shot and was carried downstairs by Pistorius. A blood-stained cricket bat also has emerged as key evidence in the case.

Miss. officially bans slavery

Fully 148 years after the end of the Civil War and the end to slavery, Mississippi has officially ratified the 13th Amendment ban on the practice. The state thought the amendment already had been ratified by its Legislature. Turns out it hadn't, at least in the eyes of federal record-keepers.

Will Google open stores?

It started with Apple stores. Then came Microsoft stores. Are Google stores next? The Silicon Valley company hopes to open retail stores in time for this year's holiday shopping season, according to a report by 9to5Google, which cites an unnamed source.

Leg room: check. Classy name: check. Big tires: check. We go car shopping with the Hawks

By Brian Hedger | FOR REDEYE

Pro athletes drive the kind of toys most of us only dream about idling down the Magnificent Mile someday (top rolled back, of course). Blackhawks players aren't much different, but they also have more in common with the average car buyer than you might think. Yes, they like their rides sleek and sexy, often with status-symbol brand names. They also like leg room, a place to put the baby seat and something that actually will fit in the garage. They also almost all agreed that when it comes to cars, the guy they call "Hossa" is boss.

What's your dream car? I should probably say a Chevy, right? I don't know, though, maybe the dream car would be, like, an Aston Martin or something.

BRYAN BICKELL

What are you driving? It's an H2 Hummer, not like Kane's. I've got the smaller guy. I bought a house two years ago and I had a Dodge Ram that was all decked out. Then I bought a house. I was like, "Oh, the garage looks pretty big." And the truck didn't fit in the garage. I was so mad.

What's your dream car? I like old hot rods. I have a '68 Dodge Monaco back home. We restored it. My dad gave it to me when I was 16 and he wanted to keep it original. I was like, "I want to paint it black," and he was like, "Not until I die." So it's a light banana yellow.

Who's got the best car(s) on the team? I've heard it's Hossa. He's been in the league a long time, though, so he should be driving the best car.

DUNCAN KEITH

What are you driving? I drive a Mercedes Benz CL 63 AMG. It's black. I wanted to get a coupe, but I wanted to get a coupe with a back seat and a decent amount of leg room.

What's your dream car? I think it'd be nice to have a Rolls Royce, but they're a little too flashy. I'd feel embarrassed getting out of something like that, but it'd definitely be nice to have somebody drive you around and just sit in the back seat.

Who's got the best car(s) on the team? Dave Bolland. He just drives around these exotic cars all the time. I'm not really sure if they're his or how he gets them. Hossa has a nice one. He's got a Porsche ... Wait, Hossa's got a Bentley, too? Then, yeah, I'd say Hossa, too.

ANDREW SHAW

What are you driving? I've got a 2012 Jeep Wrangler four-door. I'm a country boy, so I kind of put 35-inch tires on it ... actually, 37-inch tires, with 18-inch rims and a lift kit. I like to have the roof off in the summer.

What's your dream car? Dream car? Well, it could've changed looking at some of the cars at the Bentley dealership. Some of the Maseratis or Rolls Royces look unbelievable.

Who's got the best car(s) on the team? Not Leddy. He's driving this pearl-white Escalade. It's more of a chick car, if you ask me. I guess Hossa's got a nice one, a nice Porsche.

PATRICK SHARP

What are you driving? I have a BMW M6 that I like to zip around in, black-on-black, and I've got a black-on-black Jeep Rubicon with big tires on it for the winter—and I rip the doors off for the summer.

What's your dream car? I like the car that Dustin Byfuglien had a couple years ago. He was driving a purple Maserati.

Who's got the best car(s) on the team? Steve Montador's got a cool car. He's got one of those hybrids, what the heck is the name of it? It's not a Tesla. It's like a ... Fisker? [Fisker Karma] It looks like a really nice sports car. It's all electric and hybrid. Hossa's got a nice Porsche, but he's a family guy now. He needs the four doors to put the baby in the back.

VIKTOR STALBERG

What are you driving? I have a Range Rover here and a smaller Porsche 911 at home [in Sweden]. The Range Rover ... I just wanted a bigger car. I feel like in America, most cars are bigger so it's a matter of safety.

What's your dream car? When I was younger, my dad would always bring home those little toy cars he'd get when he was out traveling and I had a collection with a couple of Ferraris. That's one of those things that, hopefully, I can get at some point.

Who's got the best car(s) on the team? Marian has the best cars, for sure.

Patrick Kane and Jonathan Toews dodge vehicles on ice in a Chevy ad.

Batman and Robin, meet Toews and Kaner

By Brian Hedger | FOR REDEYE

In previous TV spots for Chevy, they've been inside a giant pinball machine and dodged sliding vehicles on the ice during a "game" enhanced by slick graphics.

Now, Blackhawks stars Patrick Kane and Jonathan Toews are masquerading as Chevy's "superheroes." The feel of this latest batch of ads is, well, cheesy.

And their Blackhawks teammates aren't letting them off easy.

"That's like choosing between two diseases, right?" Viktor Stalberg said when asked which of the duo is better in the ads. "I don't think either of them are very good, but the commercials aren't very good either. They've got to get a new producer or something."

Or do they?

"They're all so bad, they're funny," Stalberg said of the ads. "That's the good thing. That might be the purpose of it. I wouldn't be surprised."

That, of course, is the million-dollar question. Was the cheese factor intentional?

"No, we think they're cool," Kane said, smirking. "Why ... are they cheesy?"

Are hockey players good at ice skating?

"They're actually fun commercials to do, because we have a fun time doing them and we kind of laugh at the different things we're doing," Kane said. "I don't know if the last one was kind of like Batman and Robin or whatever. But any time you get together for a few hours, you try to have a good time doing it and laugh at the funny things that happen."

Such as?

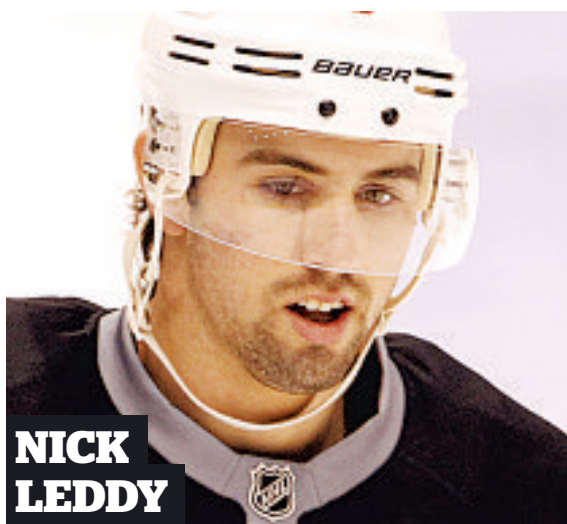

"I get my lines down quicker," Kane said. "[Toews] always takes a little while and then he gets mad at certain things. I'm just like, 'C'mon, let's do this and get out of here.'"

So who is the better actor?

"I always thought Kane was a little better and Toews was a little stiff, but now the more I see Toews on camera, he's actually the most improved," Patrick Sharp said.

"I'm going to give them both a D-minus, and I don't give them an F because all they've got to do is bring up my old Grant's Electronics commercials," he said.

"Then I'm in deep trouble."

NICK LEDDY

What are you driving? I drive a Cadillac Escalade. It's not like Shawzy's "sick" car, but it works. He did some things to his [Jeep], but I think he overhypes it a little bit.

What's your dream car? I like a lot of those sports cars, but one I'd really like, I've always seen [Hossa] drive it, is that Bentley GT.

Who's got the best car(s) on the team? I like [Keith's] Mercedes a lot.

MARIAN HOSSA

What are you driving? It's a two-door, four-seater ... a Bentley Continental Supersports. I like the leg room. Lots of those smaller cars are so tiny, [but] that car you can drive every day. I even drive it in the snow, because it has four-wheel drive.

What's your dream car? Porsche 911 Turbo. When I was young, I always liked it. The 911 is symbolic. I don't know why, but I always loved that car and never bought it—never got one.

Who's got the best car(s) on the team? I think I do. You can never go wrong with a Bentley, you know?

1	If the Hawks make history against the Canucks, Guts McTavish will ...	... drink beer, eat fries with mayo and say "eh" like he would any other day.	... tell us his real name, and spin some of this yarn into gold.	... adhere to Canucks fan regulations by rioting for the next six hours.	... learn how to grow a real 'stache from Joel Quenneville.	... run naked down the busiest street in Chicago. It's OK. I was born without a unit.
2	How are the Blackhawks blocking so many pucks this season?	Two words! Ray Emery. People say we look alike, so I got love for him!	They're pretending it's traffic when the president is in town.	Spent offseason in Springfield; massive research done on how to make sure nothing gets through.	Duncan Keith announced how much the tooth fairy pays out post-lockout.	Hopefully some are being stopped by Duncan Keith's teeth. Puppets have long memories. (No unit though.)
3	What's the Bulls' top priority in the second half of the season?	A trade that would motivate D-Rose to come back. That Bargnani deal seemed legit ...	Car service for D-Rose to the United Center.	Minimizing following sentence: "And starting at center, the man in the middle, NAZR MOHAMMED!"	Since D-Rose probably won't be back ... look forward to next year.	To hit the century mark before Betty White does?
4	What did President Obama say to Tiger Woods during their round of golf?	"Just golf." (I'm admittedly scared to say the wrong thing here.)	"Just curious, why did you leave your full name on those voice mails?"	"Can you take the G-20 summit? Putin is so annoying, and I SWEAR I won't touch your clubs."	"Winner pays off the national debt."	"So did Duffy Waldorf ever get any tail?"
5	If not broadcasting, what will Paul Konerko do when he retires?	Pottery. I seem him with a kiln for some reason.	Just go to U.S. Cellular Field and enjoy a game with the other two people.	Create the now-required, awful-tasting White Sox first baseman retiree brand of beer.	Co-write a book with Paris Hilton: "Getting Hit in the Face With Balls, and Other Life Lessons."	Participate in "Survivor" and help all us baseball purists forget about Jeff Kent's prime-time swing and a miss.

First 5 on 5, next ... real opponents?

Derrick Rose
NUCCIO DINUZZO/TRIBUNE

Derrick Rose took another step in his recovery from an anterior cruciate ligament tear, participating in five-on-five drills during Monday's practice.

"He did what everyone else did, just a normal practice," coach Tom Thibodeau said of Rose, who last week said he was unsure whether he would play this season.

Thibodeau said Rose is progressing as scheduled and the team just needs to be "patient" with him. Joakim Noah noted that Rose still isn't dunking during drills.

Kirk Hinrich, who missed the last seven games with an infected right elbow, will be back in action when the Bulls play at New Orleans on Tuesday. The team had three seven- to eight-minute scrimmages in which Rose participated.

"He was able to get out there and it's good," Hinrich said of Rose. "It was something that us as a team needed, as far as every individual coming off the break needed to scrimmage a little bit. And I'm sure it was good for [Rose], helpful to see exactly ... give him a good gauge of where he's at." REDEYE

THE MOUTHWATCH

Saturday, February 23rd at 1pm & 3pm

Pacific College of Oriental Medicine

65 East Wacker Place, 17th Floor, Chicago, IL 60601

The same filmmakers that were behind the HBO series, The Alzheimer's Project, spent three years researching and creating the most thorough and engaging healthcare documentary yet produced. Escape Fire: The Fight to Rescue American Healthcare is an in-depth exploration of contemporary American medicine. The documentary engages the viewer and offers promising efforts to heal an ineffective system—including a stronger focus on the incorporation of integrative medicine, preventative self-care, and working together from all walks of medicine to put more “care” back in healthcare.

new styles, brands show
Chicago that cider rules

The bar where Austin Harvey works goes through one keg of Chicago-based Virtue Red Streak cider each week.

That might not sound like a lot, but consider Harvey's employer—Goose Island's Clybourn brewpub, where the cider holds its own between drafts of made-on-premises special release beers and favorites such as 312 wheat ale.

"[Cider] is on the same trajectory craft beer took," Harvey said. "It's something that's certainly welcomed to the table or the tap handle."

Nationwide, hard cider is the popular new kid on the block. Sales have gained steam in the past few years, especially among millennials and those with gluten sensitivities, since cider is naturally gluten-free. U.S. cider production increased 65 percent in 2012 over the previous year, according to Nielsen data, though it's nowhere close to rivaling beer as America's booze of choice. In Chicago especially, cider makers have found drinkers thirsty for something new.

"[Chicago] was one of our first markets," said David Sipes, a cider maker with Angry Orchard, a division of Sam Adams that launched nationally in the spring and currently is the best-selling hard cider in the country. "There are sophisticated consumers [in Chicago] that are more likely to know cider, and there's certainly an established and aware craft-brewing community."

Members of that community—about 2,000 of them—turned out for the first Cider Summit Chicago, held Feb. 9 in a Navy Pier convention room. More than two dozen producers from as near as Chicago and Michigan to as far as New Zealand and Spain poured glasses of their ciders, which ranged in color from apple-juice yellow to rose pink to cloudy brown. The ciders' tastes, too, were varied, from crisp and bubbly to slightly sour and funky.

It was discovering this rainbow of ciders that gave Virtue Cider founder Greg Hall—a former Goose Island brewmaster whose father, John, founded the Chicago brewery—his cider epiphany. He traveled to England in 2000 and stumbled upon a cider festival, where more than 40 ciders ranging in style and flavor were on cask. When he came back to the U.S., he couldn't find that

into craft cocktails

By Kate Bernot | REDEYE

Ciders aren't only for sipping; they're also a refreshing canvas for mixed drinks. "It's a real nice base for cocktails because it adds some acidity," said Virtue Cider's Greg Hall, citing cider's tendency to pair well with a range of sweet and spicy flavors. Bartenders have certainly gotten the memo and are mixing up cider-based cocktails with a range of flavors and liquors.

same diversity.

"You'd walk into a place like Binny's and there would be 5,000 wines and thousands of beers and 500 whiskeys and only four ciders," Hall said.

That's quickly changing. As manufacturers see increased demand for ciders on both shelves and taps, everyone from independent producers to the major beer makers are bringing new styles to market.

In the next few months, Chicagoans will see new releases from Angry Orchard, Virtue Cider, Michigan-based Vander Mill and Uncle John's, as well as Vermont-based Woodchuck. Cider makers have expanded beyond apple-based concoctions to include pear, raspberry, apricot and peach juices in their blends. Uncle John's will release an apple-blueberry variety this summer, while Angry Orchard Elderflower cider hit shelves in six-packs this month. Piggybacking on a technique that's usually associated with craft beer, both Woodchuck and Virtue have experimented with aging their ciders in barrels, resulting in Virtue's The Mitten—on tap now—and Woodchuck's Private Reserve Barrel Select.

And while these techniques, styles and even packaging often are designed to court craft beer drinkers, many cider makers agree that the process is closer to winemaking than beer-brewing.

"We're fermenting juice," Sipes said. "It's an acid balance which, in the case of wine, comes from the grapes you select, and in the case of cider, which apples you select."

Each blend of apples and strain of yeast results in a different flavor, meaning some ciders are best sipped with certain foods, while others pair well with dessert or are designed to be enjoyed solo. It's this versatility, said Greg Hall, that explains the current cider boom.

"Today's drinker drinks everything. They might go to one bar and start off with a cocktail and then have a meal and have some wine, then watch a game and drink some American lager," Hall said. "They drink everything, and they drink cider too. It may not be their main drink, but it's going to be one of them."

Four steps to silencing cider critics

Kate Bernot

• kbernot@tribune.com
• @redeyeatdrink

Though I spend a lot of time in bars (tough gig, I know), I'm not a judgmental drinker. As long as you tip your bartender and are sober enough to balance atop your barstool, I'm of the opinion that you can fill your glass with whatever your heart desires. So what's the deal with cider shaming?

As more and more bars, especially those with craft beers, devote a draft line or two to hard cider, I've witnessed frequent scoffs at those who order it. Not cool, guys. While craft beer's popularity has made it acceptable to slowly sip beers out of delicate tulip glasses, some misinformed folks still regard cider as a wussy drink. Let's change that, shall we?

For my fellow cider aficionados, I present this handy guide to ordering cider—and silencing the haters:

Step 1: Order by brand. You wouldn't walk up to a bar and ask for just "a beer" would you? Individual ciders are very different; make sure you know which you like.

Step 2: Drink with confidence. Ladies, this can generally be accomplished with a long sip, followed by an over-the-shoulder hair swish. Dudes, don't look like you're trying to hide your glass.

Step 3: Be informed. If one of your ill-mannered friends cracks a joke about your "weak cider," have some facts on hand to refute them. You can explain that alcohol-wise, most ciders are comparable to ales at 5 or 6 percent. Then tell them about what type of cider you're drinking and why; "I like a brut cider for its crisp acidity" shows that you've purposefully chosen your drink.

Step 4: Share. Most cider critics simply haven't tried the full range of ciders now hitting tap lines. Share a sip of your cider and you may just convert some skeptics.

See? Easy as pie. But should your friends still throw shade at your cider order, take comfort in the fact that you have royal company: Prince William has publicly proclaimed his preference for cider over beer. And if a handsome Air Force pilot married to Kate Middleton isn't the height of awesomeness, I don't know what is.

« The Night Before ($10) at Tiny Lounge

4352 N. Leavitt St.
773-463-0396

In addition to a cider-and-vodka drink called Tiny Cider ($10), this Lincoln Square cocktail bar offers this refresher for gin drinkers. Both Nolet's Silver and Plymouth sloe gin are shaken with lemon juice and an egg white, then topped with Virtue's Red Streak cider.

Eval Apple ($11) at Double A

108 W. Kinzie St. 312-329-6555

When bartender Brenda Eval thinks of apples, she thinks of autumn spices and caramel, which inspired her not-too-sweet cider cocktail. She begins with a base of unsweetened, non-alcoholic cider, then adds Benedictine (an herbal liqueur) and a small scoop of apple butter, and garnishes the glass with a cinnamon salt-sugar rim.

» Cider House Sangria ($10) at Grass Fed

1721 N. Damen Ave.
773-342-6000

Using Honeycrisp apples from Washington state, manager Caitlin Hennessy heats gallon batches of house-made, non-alcoholic cider. Once cooled and strained, the cider is mixed with lemon, orange juice, bitters and brandy, then carbonated and bottled in miniature 6-ounce bottles.

ALBUM REVIEW

Elevate EP

Chamillionaire

By Adam Lukach

REDEYE SOUND BOARD
Remember Chamillionaire? The "Ridin' Dirty" guy? Well, he's back, and he doesn't even care if you call him "The Ridin' Dirty guy."

See, Chamillionaire has returned in the worst way possible, harping on stale accomplishments with a half-assed, catch-all approach to the present. You've heard rappers say something like, "Ain't back 'cause I never left," but Chamillionaire most definitely left, and he sounds like it on "Elevate," his new EP. He even brings up "Ridin' Dirty" a few times so you don't have to feel bad about saying, "Remember when ...?"

"Elevate" is supposed to be a hype-builder to "Poison," his full-length album due later this year, and a follow-up to last year's unnoticed "Ammunition" EP. From the very first drop, though, he sounds rustier than the underside of a hooty. The Houston rapper fumbles a basic Andre 3000 flow on the very first lines, completely mucking up a bumping bells-and-organs Houston beat—exactly where he should sound most comfortable.

The beats are scattershot, since Chamillionaire tries a little of everything. He attempts to bounce with his roots, stomp on the suddenly resurgent trap sound and pseudo-croon on a slow rumbler, but little of it works well. He actually sounds best on "Overnight," whose clap-drums and pitched-up synths sound more 2013 than anything else on the EP and suit his rapid, rat-a-tat flow much better.

His rhymes are inconsistent, like the LOL-worthy "Going golfing in Iraq/Going shopping in Dubai/She be asking her man for gifts/Then give me the gifts her man buy." He spends the rest of the time talking about endless amounts of haters and hoes, which is fine, but he even recycles rhymes within "Elevate."

While the production is great and Chamillionaire shows he can still flash a little rhythm, the whole thing sounds circa his 2006 prime. It doesn't help that he reminds listeners about it. "Overnight" and "Hold Up" try to force him into the present, but Chamillionaire can't stop looking over his shoulder.

Oscars presenter pairs we'd really, really love to see

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

Pick out your champagne and figure out which of your friends is wearing a gold bodysuit—it's Oscars week! Before the Academy Awards are handed out Sunday, there are a few more rounds of announcements going on: the Oscars presenters. In most categories, these guys and gals will couple off and head out onstage to give a quippy (read: usually groan-worthy) speech before handing off the golden guy. With another round of presenters announced Monday, we decided to pair them up for maximum entertainment value. Side note: The cast of "Chicago" is going to be there, and we cannot figure out a) why, or b) what happened to Renee Zellweger's career.

DAMORAN@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYEDANA

Joseph Gordon-Levitt and Channing Tatum

OK, we promise we'll stop after this (until the musical comes out), but we've got ONE more shot to milk the year of "Magic Mike." In case you missed it, JGL pulled off a pretty impressive crotch-thrusting dance during his "SNL" hosting stint, and Channing forever changed the way we hear Ginuwine's "Pony." A shirts-off dance-off is in order.

Jennifer Lawrence and Meryl Streep

Some of the most amazing celeb quotes of the past year have come straight from Jennifer's mouth, and pulling out the "First Wives Club" line "Oh what does it say? I beat Meryl!" during her Golden Globes acceptance speech was no exception. Bringing the two together on stage could only result in magic.

Halle Berry and Chris Evans

He's there because of "The Avengers." She's there because she's Halle Berry (and Storm from "X-Men"). Bring them together and you've got a super-hot super couple.

Adele and Ted

OK, this is massively unrealistic because Adele is only there to sing the "Skyfall" theme, not present. But have you ever heard the woman give an acceptance speech? She says stuff like "we've been pissing ourselves laughing over here" at the Golden Globes. We can't even imagine what would happen if she were trading barbs with a foul-mouthed stuffed bear.

Ben Affleck and Melissa McCarthy

He's guaranteed to be snubbed for best director. She was totally snubbed last year for "Bridesmaids." All these two audience faves really need to do is stand up there and smile—they're already winning at being awesome. They also could have a pretty great conversation about his flowing '70s disaster of an "Argo" haircut and beard vs. her overprocessed poodle nightmare 'do in "Identity Thief."

THE DIGIT

9.5 MILLIONThe relatively disappointing number of viewers who tuned in Sunday to CBS' "The Amazing Race," which posted its lowest-rated premiere yet, ew.com reports.

“JOSH & ME & BABY MAKES THREE!!! #MYLOVELY-BABYBUMP”

—Fergie, in a tweet Monday, confirming she and husband Josh Duhamel are expecting their first child

HOT DATE

JUNE 15

That's when the Gene Siskel Film Center will honor Gwyneth Paltrow with its Renaissance Award during a ceremony at the Ritz-Carlton Chicago, the organization announced Monday.

Gaga rolls on

Lady Gaga has found a new way to get around since canceling the rest of her tour because of a major hip injury, the Tribune's Luis Gomez reports. Mama Monster rolled into a Starbucks at 444 N. Michigan Ave. over the weekend in a wheelchair, apparently named Emma. That same day, Gaga tweeted a photo of what looks like a wheelchair with the caption "This is Emma."

Thin crust

This sounds a little too funny to be true, but Jennifer Love Hewitt has an amusing story about modeling for the cover of Shape magazine. "I think when [they] called me to tell me that I was doing the cover of Shape, I might've been eating pizza at the time," she told usmagazine.com. Yeah, a pepperoni and Photoshop pizza?

'Argo' on top

With Sunday's honor for best adapted screenplay from the Writers Guild of America, "Argo" makes its case for the best picture Oscar even stronger. The Ben Affleck film has won top prizes from the Directors Guild, Producers Guild and the American Cinema Editors so far this awards season.

Jack

McBrayer is getting a big job upgrade from NBC page. The former "30 Rock" star will play a "boyish and disheveled" dentist on "The Middle," tvline.com reports. The site indicates this could be more than a one-episode cameo. Jack Donaghy would totally approve of this, right?
